Re: Notice of Tortuous Business Interference and Libel

Dear Mr. Reynolds,

This law firm represents Redwood Recovery Solutions, LLC and its brands, including TreatmentCalls.com. I have reviewed your post, which is posted at the following url: <http://jeffreyreynolds.com/predatory-marketing-in-addiction-treatment/> You specifically mention Treatmentcalls.com and make a defamatory statements like the following: “So, desperate folks looking for treatment are calling what they believe is an info line. They are automatically transferred to a marketer (not a clinician) on a cell phone who with just three minutes to spare will inquire only about insurance coverage and the ability to spend big bucks before roping that person in or abruptly ending the call in order to avoid paying for a lead. Absolutely disgusting and worth a look from consumer protection agencies and law enforcement officials.”

Your statements are misguided and misappropriated to TreatmentCalls.com. The CEO of our company, Jason Brian, has reached out to you directly and has provided you with the correct correspondence as to our business model and the inaccurate statements you have made in your post. Please treat this letter as a demand to remove your post and as a notice of intentional and tortuous interference with our business. If the post is not removed within the next 24 hours, we will be contemplating legal action against you and seek seize and desist order with damages. We will further seek any attorney fees associated with pursuing this action. Please have your legal counsel contact me directly at the above number to discuss.

Sincerely,

Peter Feldman
